Walks Into Hoboken Restaurant Woman Reaches Down, Grabs Where Works Waitress Who, She Says, Hypnotizes Her Husband, and Plies Whip.

SAYS, WHEN ARRESTED, WOULD DO IT AGAIN.

Victim, Taller and More Muscu- plaint of a man who, with his wife, corder Paroles Prisoner to Go After Important Witnesses.

Mrs. Rose Heger, a very pretty young woman, of No. 131 Washington street, Hoboken, was a prisoner before Recorder Stanton to-day charged with horsewhipping Miss Margaret Riemer in a restaurant at No. 44 Second street, Hoboken, last night.

Miss Riemer's face was scarred with a deep gash and streaked with abrasions where the whip had fallen. She was also in a highly hysterical condi-

Mrs. Heger frankly admitted that she had horsewhipped the young woman and declared in her defense that the complainant had endeavored to break up her home. She said that Miss Riemer had hypnotized her husband and that when he, was in her company he forgot all about his home and his loving wife.

Says Girl Hypnotizes Husband. know that she hypnotizes him, said the prisoner to Recorder Stanton. "because he told me so. He loves me and is happy with me, but when he comes under the eye of this woman he does everything she asks him. I stood it as long as I could and I pleaded both with my husband and with her. Then I found that I could stand it no longer and I went to the restaurant where this woman works and I chastised her. I am not a bit sorry for it and would do it again under the same provocation." The horsewhipping took place in the main dining-room of the restaurant where Miss Riemer is employed as a waitress. There were more than two score diners in the place when the pretty little woman walked in. She walked up to the table that the waitress was serving and drew a short whip from under her cape. Before M as Riemer, who is at least a foot tailer and powerfully built, could raise her hand, Mrs. Heger brought the whip down on her shoulders with all her force. As her victim staggered back she rained a shower of blows about her face and back, crying: "I will punish you for trying to steal my husband from me."

Victim Doesn't Defend Herself.

The prisoner declared she could bring witnesses to court to corroborate this statement, and Recorder Stanton paroled her until Friday, when she promised to produce these witnesses before him.

Handful of Curly Hair Screams Loudly and Arouses Everybody in the Hotel.

Two curly headed boys were arraigned n Jefferson Market Court to-day on a tentative charge of larceny. The charge grew out of a nap they took under one of the beds in the Hotal Carlo, No. 28 West Twenty-first street, and the comwent to sleep in the bed that $23 was lar. Put Up No Defense-Re- missing from his purse after the woman discovered the boys under the bed.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carroll, of Rosebank, S. I., according to the register of the hostelry, came to New York on a chopping tour yesterday, and put up at the Carlo for the night. They were aw a young man clasping a young assigned to a room that had not been used for some time, and soon were asleep. Mrs. Carroll, who is a light sleeper, was awakened by a snore. She knew it was not her husband. This was an irregular snore that had a

Mrs. Carroll woke up her husband and asked him if he heard the snore. He said he did. Then she reached her hand down by the side of the bed and grabbed a handful of curly hair. Her screams awoke the entire house and also two youths who had been sleeping peacefully under the bed.

Mr. Carroll ran to the window and cailed for help. Detectives Sullivan and Freabone, who were passing the hotel, heard the cries and forced their way in. When they reached Mr. Carroll's room the owner of the curly head had disappeared. Mrs. Carroll said she had seen two small shadows fit out of the room. The detective searched the hotel from top to bottom and finally found two curly-haired boys in a coal bin in the cellar. They were Frank and Eric Erricl, nephews of Mrs. Alphonse Canarsi, the wife of the proprietor of the hotel.

After their capture Mr. Carroll discovered that he had lost $23 in $5 and $6 bills from his wallet and charged the boys with the theft. No money was found in their clothing, however, and they stoutly denied their guilt.

When they were arraigned in court today Mr. Carroll falled to appear against them. The detectives made a short affidavit and they were held pending a forty-eight hour investigation.

A FALSE ALARM

Handle of Fire-Box at Brooklyn House of Good Shepherd to See What It was For, and Discovers.

The waitress made no attempt to deficied herself and was sinking to the floor under the furious lashing she was receiving when the proprietor of the place came to her rescue.

Miss Riemer denied in court that she shad attempted to alienate the affections of Mr. Heger and said that she never saw him except when he came into the charge made by Mrs. Heger that she charge made by Mrs. Heger that she had seen her leaving a hotel with Mr. Heger at an early hour in the morning was untrue.

The greatest excitement the good sisters at the House of Good Shepard, Pacific street and Hopkins avenue, Brooklept, have known for many a day threw the whole building into a pandemonlaum to-day when fire engines clattered up to the door and the inmates began to scream and run hysterically through scream and run hysterically through scream and run hysterically through the rooms.

Sisters appeared at the door and implored the firemen to go away, that it was only a mistake. After the sisters had succeeded in quieting the inmates and restoring affairs in the home to a semi-normal condition, the terrible scoret of the fire alarm all came out.

At twenty minutes to 1 a fire alarm from the House of the Good Shepherd was turned in. In a few minutes afterward Police Headquarters was called up and a trembling voice implored the office over the phone to stop the fire-engines, that the alarm had been turned in by mistake, that there was no fire at the House of the Good Shepherd.

To an Evening World reporter one of the sisters said:

"It was all just a mistake of on of the sisters she didn't know what the fire alarm was and she oulled the crank just for fun. The Mother Superior will be so annoved about it that I do wish we could have called in that alarm before the excitement was started."

All the time a trembling little sister was guiltliv shaking on account of her mild soortiveness and vowing that she would never again forget herself and be facetious.
